PRIME TIME PICKS

By JON BURLINGAME

In October, a severe earthquake rocked Southern California, cracking freeways, shattering storefronts, knocking houses off their foundations and sending one television newsman diving beneath his anchor desk. The worst California earthquake since 1971 killed six people.

It was also a warning of the catastrophic earthquake that scientists are certain will devastate California within 30 to 50 years.

What are the startling implications of the big quake on California and the world?

"The Earthquake Is Coming" (9 p.m., WSKG-TV 46 and WCNY-TV 24), a Frontline with Judy Woodruff documentary, is a repeat broadcast which reveals what will happen when that earthquake finally strikes and examines its awesome impact on our economy and national security.

Neighborhoods will crumble. Fires and rubble will create giant traffic jams. A disruption in electronic communications will affect world economy, and possible military destruction will threaten national security. Injuries will overburden hospitals which aren't ready and never really can be.

"How do you prepare for enough injured to fill every emergency hospital bed in the free world?" says Terry Jagerson, Deputy Sheriff of Emergency Services in San Mississippi ETV presents an encore broadcast of this high-spirited romp through a selection of show stoppers when "Great Performances" presents "Baryshnikov on Broadway" at 10 p.m., Friday, March 18.

In 1914, a self-taught Indian mathematician broke social and religious taboos by leaving wife, home and friends to sail for England and Cambridge University. Six years later, at age 32, Srinivas Ramanujan was dead. But he left behind some of the most remarkable and beautiful ideas in the history of mathematics. No one quite knows where these ideas came from. "NOVA" explores the enigmatic life and ideas of "The Man Who Loved Numbers," at 8 p.m., Tuesday, March 22, on Mississippi ETV.

"The Earthquake is Coming," an ETV "Frontline" documentary with Judy Woodruff airing at 9 p.m., Tuesday, March 22, is a rebroadcast which reveals what will happen when a catastrophic earthquake finally strikes California and examines the impact on our economy and national security.

It is 1961 in Palm City, Fla. The local economy is in need of a fix. Developers want to fill in 800 acres accommodate a real estate development. Television's day in the country

The royal road has been long and hard for this country and western queen, as you'll find out in "Tammy Wynette: Stand By Your Dream" on Arts & Entertainment at 8 p.m. For more "Country," HBO has the 1984 film starring Sam Shepard and Jessica Lange as farmers struggling to eke out a living.

In the second episode of "Wonder Years" at 8:30 p.m. on Channel 5, Kevin faces both a friend's funeral and the rigors of junior high school sex education.

Last we checked, California was still there, which is probably why they're repeating "The Earthquake is Coming" on "Frontline" (9 p.m. on Channel 2). This 1987 report looks into the state's preparedness.
